CHINA-INDIA: Visit by Foreign Minister Huang Hua

The visit to New Delhi planned for late June by Foreign Minister Huang Hua signals a renewal of the Sino-Indian rapprochement that began last year. The process was stalled by New Delhi's recognition of the Heng Samrin government in Kampuchea. Beijing is pleased that India has shown restraint recently on international issues on which the two countries are at odds, and the visit is meant to help reassure New Delhi that increased international aid to Pakistan is not directed even partially at India. Neither side expects Huang's discussions to achieve a breakthrough on the Sino-Indian border dispute and other longstanding issues. [REDACTED]
